'IT'S SLAVERY' WHY TIME MATTERS FOR GENDER-SENSITIVE, MULTIDIMENSIONAL POVERTY MEASUREMENT

MARCH 20, 2:30pm

UN CHURCH CENTER, LEVEL 10

This event will explore time-use and excessive labour burden, its impact on women's lives and why time-use matters for understanding multidimensional poverty.

Lily Be'Soer, Voice for Change (VfC) Director, will discuss findings from a VfC study on violence against women and girls in Jiwaka Province, Papua New Guinea. Women's daily burden of work was identified by women as the most serious form of violence they experienced.

Joanne Crawford, from the IWDA Individual Deprivation Measure team will share how this ground-breaking new tool measures multidimensional poverty and deprivation at the individual level to reveal its gendered dimensions, including insights into disparity within the household.

The IDM is a partnership between the Australian National University and the International Women's Development Agency with strategic funding support from the Australian Government through the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade.
